

PERSISTENT RUMORS CURRENT THAT GERMAN PLANE HAS BEEN SIGHTED OVER NOVA SCOTIA, FLYING TO THE SOUTH

Estimated If Was "Bremen" Sighted at 10.45, Should Reach Mitchell Field Between 2 and 3 P. M., If Good Speed Should Be Maintained

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
MITCHELL FIELD, N. Y., Apr. 13.—A persistent report was current here at 11 o'clock that the German transatlantic plane Bremen had been sighted over Kingsport, Nova Scotia, at 10.45 a. m. (Nova Scotia time or 9 a. m. eastern standard time) flying in a southerly direction. Kingsport is about five hours flying time from Mitchell Field. It was estimated that, if the plane sighted at Kingsport really was the Bremen and was able to maintain its best speed, it should reach here between 2 and 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Throughout the morning rumors of all kinds were received here. The Kingsport report, however, received most credence. Despite the long absence of news of the Bremen's progress there was a strong public belief that the plane would make the flight successfully. Before noon 2,000 persons had gathered here and more were arriving hourly by train and automobile.

Kingsport is on the Minas Basin, 55 miles north by northwest of Halifax.

NEW YORK, Apr. 13.—(INS)—Somewhere over the Atlantic, the trim, silver-gray Bremen was believed to be waging a grim fight against the elements today in the attempt of its three intrepid occupants to reach America in a westward flight.

The single-motored monoplane was last sighted at 7.25 a. m. (Irish time), yesterday morning as it disappeared in the mists over Aran Island at the entrance to Galway Bay on the west coast of Ireland.

When Captain Herman Koehl, commandant James E. Fitzmaurice and Baron Ehrenfried von Huenefeld departed from the Baldonnel airfield at 5.38 a. m., yesterday on their daring venture, weather reports indicated that conditions were perfect as far west as the mid-Atlantic.

Wireless dispatches from a German ship in mid-Atlantic later indicated that snow and hail were falling and that a west wind of terrific velocity was blowing at the surface.

The Bremen may have avoided the particular storm area reported by the German ships or may have escaped the full strength of the wind, by flying high.

However, all shipping reports indicated that the fliers encountered poor visibility, clouds and head winds averaging about 30 miles an hour.

From Newfoundland came a meagre report last night that an undescribed plane had been heard passing over Trinity Bay in a southwesterly direction. This report could not be confirmed.

The fliers had stated before their start that they hoped to reach the American mainland early this morning and Mitchell Field, L. I., sometime this afternoon. The unconfirmed report stated that the unidentified plane was heard at 8 o'clock last night.

Another report that the Bremen had been sighted about 800 miles west of Ireland late yesterday was branded as false by officials at the Baldonnel airfield who declared that at the time of the report they estimated the ship was at least 1500 miles out. The British Air Ministry and Lloyd's at London have received no news of the plane, they informed International News Service today.

Wireless messages received at London from the United States liners America and George Washington stated they had been sweeping skies with their searchlights since midnight but had not seen the Bremen.

The distance over the ocean from the west coast of Ireland to Newfoundland is approximately 1800 miles. The plane's cruising speed is 97 miles an hour. Even if this were cut down to 70 miles an hour by headwinds, the plane should have reached the American mainland by 3 a. m. (eastern standard time), if it had kept to its course. The fact that the plane has not been definitely sighted at Newfoundland is causing much conjecture.

It is believed possible that the fliers may have encountered storms and changed their course to the southern route instead of continuing on the "great circle." In that case they would not pass over land until reaching Long Island.

Weather conditions at Newfoundland are almost perfect. The sky was clear all night and whatever winds there were, came from the east and were favorable for the fliers. It is not considered likely that the fliers have passed the peninsula without having been sighted.

The Bremen carried sufficient fuel to remain aloft about 45 hours. That deadline will elapse at nine o'clock tonight. If the ship is forced down, it should be able to stay afloat longer than any other type of land plane, as it has air-tanks in the wings and an air-tight fuselage of steel.

Three previous attempts to span the Atlantic from east to west have ended tragically within the last year with a loss of seven lives.

Township Officer Warns Of Clothing Salesmen

Officer H. Lincoln Hughes, of Bensalem Township, issues a warning to residents of this section who may be solicited for orders for men's clothing by two men who state they represent the Standard Clothing Company of 75th Street, New York City.

The township officer remarked today that he had received complaints from Bristolians to the effect they had purchased suits of clothing from the two salesmen, who stated that Hughes had purchased clothing from them, and recommended the company.

When the clothing arrived it was found to be of a very inferior grade, and worth less than half of the sum paid for it.

"I do not know the men who are making these solicitations, and never purchased articles from the company they say they represent," said Mr. Hughes today.

Women Voters League Hears Institute Report

Mrs. John Moyer, vice chairman of the Bristol League of Women Voters, presided at a meeting of that organization in the Wood street school building yesterday.

Reports were given by the three members who attended the institute conducted at Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr College, on Tuesday. The reports on the institute were given by Mrs. Serrell Douglass, Mrs. Emil Metzger and Mrs. John Moyer.

League members from Bristol will attend an inter-county meeting which will take place at the Doylestown Country Club on May 10th. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Thomas Ross, of Doylestown. Addresses on "District Registering" will also be made.

STORE AND POST OFFICE AT BRIDGEWATER ROBBED

Thieves Gain Entrance By Forcing Lock of Rear Door

LOOT VALUED OVER $50

Thieves breaking into the post office and a store at Bridgewater during the night, made a get-away with $18.75 in cash and stamps, and goods amounting to approximately $35.

The intruders gained an entrance through a door at the rear, by forcing the lock, and then continued to help themselves.

The Bridgewater postmaster is John Hockman, while Mrs. John Vandegrift operates the store.

Pennies to the amount of $3.75 were taken at the post office as well as $15 worth of two-cent stamps. As far as can be learned money orders or other valuables were not tampered with.

In the store section the thieves, who were apparently hungry, generously helped themselves to ice cream from one of the cans, and then secured for their later use; one dozen packs of cigarettes, a box of cigars, large quantity of crackers, an eight-pound lunch roll, and 50 chocolate-pieces.

Officer H. Lincoln Hughes was notified of the loss and proceeded to make an investigation. Mr. Hughes stated today that he expects to make an arrest of two individuals who are now under suspicion.

The theft was discovered at seven o'clock this morning, when the post-office was opened.

BOYS OF BRISTOL HIGH THROW SELVES INTO SPIRIT OF THE GREAT AMERICAN GAME; SEVERAL SCHOOLS ON SCHEDULE

Baseball Season Eagerly Looked Forward To — Much New Material Enters Local Halls of Learning — Various Organizations Functioning Well

Boy students at Bristol high school have thrown themselves into the spirit of the great American game—baseball—and are making great plans for coming games.

Nons of the members of last year's team were lost by graduation and for this the faculty and students are thankful. Much material should therefore be available, as many new candidates have entered the high school ranks. Coach Kenneth Townsend hopes to round a team into shape that Bristol will be proud of.

Just now 16 games are scheduled, with eight high schools. Each team will play one game here and one away. The schools are as follows: Newtown, Bensalem, Lambertville, Langhorne, Mount Holly, Bordentown and either Morrisville or Hatboro high schools; and Bryn Athyn Academy.

Much propaganda is being urged just now, in regards to good support from the non-players. Rooters will be appreciated by those who make the team.

Another form of athletic events is gaining much interest likewise just now. Manager Swain, of Bristol High, has announced that he has arranged for Bristol's entrance into the following track meets.

Penn Relay Carnival at University of Pennsylvania; Bucks County Interscholastic Track Meet at George School; Swarthmore College Interscholastic Track Meet, at Swarthmore; Lower Merion High School, Lower Merion; West Chester State Teachers' College Int. Track Meet, West Chester; Glenn Mills, Glen Mills; Bristol high school interclass meet and May Day combined program at home.

The schools which will participate in the Bristol high school interscholastic track meet are: Bristol, Langhorne, Newtown, Morrisville and Bensalem high schools.

Many of the organizations of the Bristol high school have been arranging splendid entertainment programs for the chapel exercises during the past several weeks.

Since the idea originated the numbers have proved both pleasing and instructive. In this manner the talents of many students are being brought to the front.

The ring ceremonial conducted by the Girl Reserves, of which there is a branch at the Bristol high school, is an impressive sight.

One of these ceremonials was conducted during last month and many of the Reserves attended. A circle is formed on this occasion, inside of which is a blue triangle. At the apex is placed a blue pillow on which the girls kneel to receive their rings. The keeper of the seal leads the girls to the room where the Hymn of Lights is played. The girls receive rings for active work in Girl Reserves work.

Following this ceremony in March candle service was held when a number of new members were admitted to the club.

"The Crepe Paper Club" is the name taken by a group of Bristol high girls who enjoy fashioning flowers of crepe paper.

Officers are: President, Thelma Bradley; secretary, Betty Hill; and treasurer, Ruth Pickering.

SAMUEL W. MILNOR DIES HERE AT AGE OF 80 YEARS

Well Known Resident of 3rd Ward Was Ill Long Time

HERE OVER 50 YEARS

Samuel W. Milnor died yesterday afternoon at his residence 520 Linden street after a lingering illness. The deceased was 80 years old September 3, 1927, and was a native of Bristol. He had resided in the Borough for a period of at least 50 years.

Mr. Milnor was active for many years in the affairs of the community and held the position of Harbor Master for 20 years. He was a member of Knights of Mystic Chain and Goodwill Fire Company, No. 3.

Mr. Milnor served as a member of Borough Council for six years and for many years was Republican committeeman in the Third Ward.

The survivors are one son, Edward Milnor, Merchantville, N. J.; two daughters, Mrs. Walter Smith, Piqua, Ohio, and Mrs. Katie Gentleman, Bristol; grandsons, Elmer Smith, Samuel Milnor; granddaughters, Mrs. Edward Turner and Mrs. George White; three great grandchildren, George, Mercy and Laura White.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at two o'clock from the late residence of the deceased with burial in the Bristol cemetery under the direction of the H. S. Rue Estate.

"THAT'S THAT" GOES OVER BIG AT GRAND THEATRE

High School Students Present Very Attractive Production

FAVORABLY RECEIVED

Comments, each one pleasing and a congratulation in itself, followed in quick succession the closing number of "That's That," the musical comedy presented at the Grand Theatre last evening by Bristol high school students.

The two-act play, which has been talked about for weeks past, surpassed in many ways the various performances given from year to year by this group of students.

With the raising of the curtain on the opening chorus, "Down Where the Palm Trees Grow" the interest on the part of the large audience was keen. The setting for the first act, that of a Palm Beach Hotel, was very attractive, with the beach showing in the distance, palms and ferns added to the most attractive furnishings.

The two leads, Eloise Reswick and Kenneth Jones, parts taken by Florence Police and Howard Smoyer, were well acted, and the solo work of these two principals was encored each time.

Miss Marion Harrison who took the part of Eloise's aunt, Mrs. Archibald Sutherland, enacted it in a most matronly manner. William Winslow, as John Neilson, America's bottle king, was also accorded a splendid ovation.

Principals in the amusing roles of the evening were: Winifred Tracy as Mamie Rimer, and Clinton Smith, as Mickle Sullivan a typical East Sider, and Mamie's lover, Mickle and Mamie brought forth gales of laughter with their East Side twang and slang, Mamie's usual answer to her lover's question being "Gee, ain't that swell 1-1?"

Others in the main parts of the play were: Willie Hepp, a bell boy, Arthur Reynolds; Letitia Brownell, a social climber, Marjorie Rommel, whose solo dance numbers were exceptionally well executed; Jane Bronson, a guest at the hotel, Doris Johns; Martin Morris, friend of Kenneth's, Leslie Strumfels; Eddie Dewey, a real estate man from the "sticks," Clarence Young, who acted his part to perfection; Nanette Neilson, John Neilson's daughter, Dorothy Barnfield; Suzanne, of the information bureau, Margaret Priestly; Lotta Questions, Margaret Hendricks; Helen, a hotel guest, Dorothy Hardy; Prunella, Helen's little sister, Michael DeRisi.

The steps executed by the 11 choruses showed that much time and effort had been expended, and the costumes were in keeping with the scenes in each instance. One of the choruses, which was thoroughly applauded, and was forced to appear several times in succession was the East Siders group. This group of 11, in typical East Side costumes, which were grotesque in themselves, was thoroughly enjoyed by the attendants at the theatre.

The orchestra numbers, as well as the accompaniments for the solo parts with Miss Hilda MacArthur at the piano, were excellent and added to the success of the evening.

SIXTH WARD BOYS

SCOUTS TURNING EYES UPON BIG PERKASIE EVENT

Lads Will Meet There for The County Championships, Saturday, April 21

THE FOURTH SEMINAR

Equipment Budget for Camp Will Be Talked Over Soon

All "Scouters' eyes" are turned toward the northern part of Bucks County for the first Bucks County Boy Scout Day to be held Saturday, April 21, at Perkasio. Beginning at Perkasio at 2.30 will be the four district championship winners in this scout meet for county championships.

The day promises to be one of unusual interest to all friends of Scouting. A movie will be shown at 6 p. m., followed by a parade at 7.15, and concluding with a camp rally in the evening. Troop Committees all over the county are arranging transportation for the members of their scout troops as it is to be the first mobilization of all boy scouts. The mobilization has its value from the recent request of the National Headquarters that all scout councils be so organized that their entire membership can be ready for instant call should calamities occur in their section such as has befallen the Mississippi River, St. Louis and New England Councils where such splendid work has been done by scouts in emergency service. Isn't there value in our own Bucks County being able to put 638 scouts and 55 adult leaders in the field for immediate first aid and general service?

With a meeting of the camp committee of the Bucks County Council, Boy Scouts of America, scheduled for tonight at eight o'clock, at District Attorney Arthur Eastburn's office, interest is being centered on the result of the committee in having secured 200 selected contributors to make possible the camp purchase and equipment budget of $20,000. Already a considerable sum has been secured, and the committee plans to conclude this special effort by the latter part of this month. National Headquarters figures on camping are especially interesting at this time. Up to and including February 1, 1928, 456 of the Boy Scout Councils out of a total of 643 had submitted their reports showing a property valuation of camp sites reaching the sum of $3,154,915.27 owned by the Boy Scout Councils. The report also stated that the national average distance of camps from their Council Headquarters was 35.4 miles. The distance to Buccoo is only 31 miles whereas in our own region, No. 3, the average distance is 33.4 miles. It has been found advisable from years of experience in camping to locate camps an average of thirty to sixty miles from the scout headquarters, in view of the value derived from a change of home environment and problems of discipline.

The fourth meeting of the Seminar for all men being conducted by the training committee, under the leadership of George Ross, chairman, will take place Tuesday, April 17th, at the Bucks County Armory, Doylestown. The speaker of special interest will be Thomas G. Cairns, director of the field department of the Philadelphia Boy Scout Council. Captain Daniel Atkinson will conduct a drill in movements of the "School of the Patrol" dealing with methods of maneuvering a patrol of eight scouts. Troop No. 5, Bristol, Harrison C. Leake, scoutmaster, is presenting a trek cart drill beginning promptly at 7.30 which involves the equipment and methods of handling patrol hiking. A dramatization of a "Troop Locating a Week-end Camp" by Troop No. 2, of Doylestown, presented under the leadership of W. O. Weisel, out-of-door troop committeeman, promises to be of special interest. It is to be an indoor "Out-of-Door Program." Everyone is welcome. The only admission charged to any of the Seminars is that of attending and occupying a seat.

INDIVIDUALISM

Why are the people of the United States accused of lack of individualism and independent thought and tastes? Is it because they enjoy a common desire for homes, radios, automobiles, movies, books, music and theatrical performances? Does the culturist demand that one man shall crave the radio, another desire an automobile and a third a book? This would be impossible on the face of it, so the wish of the individualist must be interpreted in the sense that no two persons should enjoy the same book, the same kind of automobile and the works of the same composer.

If that is the kind of individualism the people's critics desire is it not already granted to them as near as such a thing is feasible in a country of the magnitude of the United States?

There are sixty automobile manufacturers in the United States, each making upwards of a dozen different models. In addition there are many builders of custom bodies for domestic and foreign automobiles and in all of the larger American cities are sales agencies for the better automobiles of foreign manufacture. Obviously there is some individualism shown in the choice of an automobile. The same situation applies to the radio and to home architecture, and as for the public's literary tastes, they extend over the entire scope of literature from the classics to the lightest fiction. Thousands own radios but not all enjoy the same radio program. Have not the American people been found too critical and divergent in their views and opinions on certain occasions?

WHY "ISM" FLOURISHES

A humorist, writing of a family given to frequent change of habitation, tells how the chickens of the moving owner, on noting signs of a coming change of habitation, lie on their backs and hold up their legs to be tied. So the "ism" faddists seem to have become so resigned to seeming change of metaphysical position by so-called thought leaders that, on the offer of a new "ism," they promptly make themselves ready to be tied.

Hence the increasing number of new-thought schools that are rising on every hand. The long-headed exponents of "isms," with an eye to the main chance and with ear to the ground for "tips" as to the direction of fad sentiment, are reaping enormous profits out of the gullible, as witness the packed audiences in attendance on their lectures and the thronged classrooms of certain teachers indoctrinated by the "fashionable."

Much of their "stuff," though labeled new, is really old. Much of their teaching listed as wisdom is exploded sophistry. The novelty of their ideas is chiefly in the dressing. But this seemingly is of no interest to the followers of frequently changing "isms." They do not stop to count the cost of indulgence in the "ism" fad and hold up their feet to be tied and their purses to be untied. So the "isms" flourish.

Among those keeping irregular hours are poker fiends, owls and the high-school girl's first wrist watch.

Some men are born meek, some acquire meekness and others marry the kind of girl who shoots 36 holes of golf after lunch.

That part of the exercise which seems to have a strong appeal for the golf player is the motor ride to the links.

THE JAZZ SINGER

NOVELIZED BY ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picture-ization of this novel. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS
Because Jackie, son of Cantor Rabinowitz, prefers jazz to Synagogue music, he leaves home. Ten years elapse. Through Mary Dale, a dancer, Jackie, now Jack Robin, becomes a musical comedy jazz singer. The Cantor, discovering his son's profession, disowns him. Jack's shoe opens the Eve of Yom Kippur. Ditties, the back of the show, jealous of Mary's love for Jack, withdraws his money, leaving Jack, the producer, dependent on Jack for success. The Cantor is ill and Yudel-son, his friend, begs Jack to sing in the Synagogue that night. Jack refuses. While Mrs. Rabinowitz comforts the Cantor she decides to find Jack and explain matters herself.

"Yeh, yeh, Yosele," she murmured. She waited for a few moments. Then she tried withdrawing her hand stealthily from his clasp. He stirred uneasily, but dropped back into his accustomed lethargy immediately. Once more she began pulling her hand away, this time with greater success. She wasn't quite certain how she could explain her absence in case the Cantor should wake again, and as she was debating on the possibilities of leaving the house—Yudel-son opened and Dr. O'Shaughnessy entered followed by the nurse.
"Well, well, Mrs. Rabinowitz," the gruff haired, hearty looking Irishman rubbed his hands professionally. "And how's the patient today?" He began opening his bag and taking out a stethoscope. He turned to the nurse with some questions and the two examined the temperature chart that hung by the bedside. The doctor shook his head gravely.

Mrs. Rabinowitz got up and touched the doctor's arm hesitatingly. "Is he better, doctor?" she whispered.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy smiled. "Well, see, now—we'll see. Suppose you just go out in the other room and sit down and rest a bit." He propelled her gently towards the door.

Meantime Yudel-son was fighting his own battles in the Synagogue. Seated at the head of a long table he was expounding his authority to a group of four of his co-religionists.

"But gentlemen, I think it should be me who should sing in the Cantor's place," Levy, a little, scrawny man with a sparse, scraggly beard, stood up, interrupting the flow of Yudel-son's language.

"Bang! Bang! Bang! Yudel-son pounded with his fists on the table. "Levy, you sit down!" he ordered. "Ain't I the chairman? Ain't I got to speak?"

"But it's my right I should sing—"

"Schlemiel!" Yudel-son yelled angrily. "Do you think the congregation paid for special five dollars for the Day of Atonement singing for you squawking like a tom-cat yet?"

The din of five argumentative voices rose high on the air. Who would sing, then? Levy shouldn't sing! Where was there a Cantor to be got now?

"You should let me worry about that!" Yudel-son made himself heard above the noise. "Ain't I the chairman, yet?"

They subsided.
"Our beloved Cantor is very sick next door," Yudel-son continued, glaring at Levy, who shrank back into his chair, quelled for the moment. "He should hear you sing, he dies sure," Yudel-son rose and jammed his hat down on his head. "The meeting is over," he announced. "I do the worrying." He stalked out the door.

He returned to the Cantor's home in search of the latest news. Mrs. Rabinowitz was moving about nervously trying to find a coat, a shawl, anything to wear uptown. She didn't want to leave before the doctor, but she felt that she must go quickly if her errand were to do any good. She listened at the bedroom door, but she could hear nothing save a slight clink of bottles and the swish of the nurse's skirts. Furthermore, she didn't know what excuse she could make to the nurse for going out.

Yudel-son came in at that moment with the old question on his lips.

"I don't know, Mr. Yudel-son," Mrs. Rabinowitz answered him. "The doctor come. He's inside with the Cantor. He don't say nothing."

Yudel-son nodded and sat down awaiting the advent of the doctor. Mrs. Rabinowitz felt uneasy. She questioned the advisability of saying anything about her proposed visit to Jackie for fear it would be discouraged. Yet she believed that if Jackie once saw his mama and heard how really serious was his papa's condition he would surely come.

"Mr. Yudel-son," she finally whispered. "I think I go by the theater and see Jackie—now."

"N-n-n, Mrs. Rabinowitz, it won't do no good," Yudel-son advised. "Ain't I told you Jackie sings by the theater tonight. He couldn't come. I explain him about his papa—I tell him he should come—he can't come. Ain't it all that money—"

Yudel-son was interrupted by the appearance of the doctor, who came out folding up his instruments and his case. Both Yudel-son and Mrs. Rabinowitz jumped up eagerly.

"The Cantor!" they both exclaimed.

"Now, now, Mrs. Rabinowitz, you mustn't excite yourself," Dr. O'Shaughnessy laid a restraining hand on her arm. "The Cantor is not much better, I'm afraid. You'll have to keep him very quiet—don't allow anyone to see him. He must have absolute rest. I'm doing everything I can. If he sleeps—so much the better. Don't disturb him, whatever you do. I'll call in later this evening to see how he is. Good day." He picked up his hat and went out the door.

"Mr. Yudel-son," Mrs. Rabinowitz turned on the jeweler hysterically. "I got to go find Jackie. I'm his mama. If I tell the Cantor Jackie sings tonight he gets all right. I got to go."

Mrs. Rabinowitz searched frantically for her shawl. "All right, all right," Yudel-son agreed, "but I go with you. I know where is Jackie. Maybe he'll come for his mama."

The nurse appeared in the doorway. "Mr. Rabinowitz is sleeping," she told them quietly. "You're very tired," she went over and patted Mrs. Rabinowitz kindly. "Why don't you go out for just a little walk. You need some fresh air."

"Sure, sure, Mrs. Rabinowitz," Yudel-son urged. "We go out for a little while."

Mrs. Rabinowitz threw her shawl over her head. "He is asleep," she murmured. "Sure, I go out, now. You take care for him," she smiled up at the nurse.

"Yes, I'll take good care of him," the nurse promised.

Yudel-son and Mrs. Rabinowitz started uptown.

CHAPTER XVI

As the curtain came down for intermission Jack hurried to his dressing room to put on his make-up. He opened the door, glanced abstractly at himself in the mirror and set about mechanically preparing the necessary articles for his blackface role. He dropped off his top layer of clothes, revealing another suit beneath it. He loosened his collar, turned his shirt in at the throat, rolled up his sleeves and sat down before his mirror. Like an automaton he worked, smoothing on the layers of grease paint. Now and again he caught himself staring, vague and unseeing, at himself in the glass. A knock came at the door.

"Come in," he called, scarcely turning in his chair to see who his visitor might be. The mirror revealed the reflection of a fluttering, filmy pink, ostrich-tipped costume. A burst of music sounded loud and then died away as Mary opened and closed the door.

"Hello, Jack," Mary came over and stood like a bird poised for flight by the dressing table.

"Hello," Jack answered lethargically.

"Well?" Mary looked at the boy smiling. But no answering smile met her greeting.

"Well, what?" Jack propped his elbow on the table and leaned his head on his hand.

"Well, you haven't said anything about my costume. Isn't it lovely?" she pirouetted round gaily.

"Oh, yes—yes—it's awfully nice," Jack turned and dully surveyed the little dancing figure.

"Goodness gracious me!" she grimaced, "but aren't you high-hat."

"Oh, I'm sorry, Mary," Jack rose wearily and went to the wash basin to cleanse his hands of the paint, "but I've got ten million things on my mind. I—I just can't think straight."

BECKER FURNITURE

"Earmarked" Quality
When you see the Becker tag, name-plate and bond attached to a piece of furniture, you can rest assured you are buying not only surface beauty but sub-surface worth and inside value.

Fine upholstery . . . resilient steel springs . . . staunch frames . . . durable fabrics . . . those details of construction so essential to long wear (yet so often cheapened), are guaranteed to you under the bonded pledge of D. Becker & Sons.

This unusual high-back chair is novel, yet conservative, thoroughly in keeping with the modern trend of decoration. Solid mahogany, covered in linen fringe. A typical Becker creation. Ask your dealer to show you chair No. 225.

Nash is one of the great leaders in the business of building the World's motor cars, because Nash delivers finer motoring at lower cost.

This is the plain truth. It is even more apparent today than ever before, due to the recently announced Nash price reduction.

Now you can buy the fine Special Six five-passenger four-door Sedan illustrated above at a new low price—only $1295, f. o. b. the factory. And its companion model on the Advanced Six chassis now sells at an equally attractive figure—$1495 f. o. b. Kenosha.

New Reduced Prices—24 Models—$845 to $1990—f. o. b. factory

See these cars and realize what amazing values they are. True fine-car atmosphere and refreshing style characterize every detail in their quality-built bodies.

Drive one of them and discover its equally pronounced superiority in performance—the surpassing smoothness and extra power of the famous Nash 7-bearing, precision balanced, 6-cylinder motor.

Either sedan may be had with six wire or six disc wheels, two of them side-carried and equipped with extra tires, at moderate extra cost.

Two Marble Champions Are Picked At Schools

Two school champions in the marble game have been determined in Bristol to date, in connection with the eliminations for Bucks County marble contests.

At the Bath street building Charles Fallin came out on top, after playing against 32 competitors, while at the Wood street building the fortunate lad in the shooting game was Frederick Caputa. Here young Caputa found 63 opponents. Elimination contests are now being conducted in all of the schools.

To the best player in each building a bronze medal will be given.

Parkland

Mrs. William E. Bates and daughter, Noel, of Ithaca, New York, arrived here on Saturday to spend several days with their cousins, Mrs. Mary Brong and daughter, Miss Jessie Brong, of Fairview avenue.

Philip Lawrence is making considerable improvement on his home property here by building an addition to his kitchen and constructing a long rose arbor on his grounds.

Jack Kirk, of Philadelphia, enjoyed last week here as the guest of his little friend, Charles McIntyre, Jr.

R. Nissley Dougherty, of Philadelphia, was the Sunday guest of his brother, Roy Dougherty, of Avenue B.

Miss Edith Hagerman, of Oak Lane, was a recent guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Annie Lippen, of Highland avenue.

On Monday Mrs. Mary Cooke returned to her city home after more than a week here with her daughter, Mrs. Charles McIntyre.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ryan were recent dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hibbert, of Trenton, N. J.

Two weeks ago plowing for an early garden was started at Compton Manor Farm, by Frank Wismer, manager, and since then, other gardens have been started in this section, while others are engaged in putting their lawns in order.

Last week the Thursday evening pinocle card party was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Stock, of Avenue D.

Mrs. D. Bonnell and son, Bruce, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Roy Dougherty for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kraus on Sunday entertained at dinner a number of relatives and friends as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kraus, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Dewey, Walter Kraus, Miss Henrietta Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kraus, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Goldman, Mrs. Hackett and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Beidler.

A LAW FOR ONE

If every child could be taught early at his mother's side, in the words of Frances Willard, "to enact a prohibitory law for one, and that one himself, to declare that law constitutional in the supreme court of his own judgment, and to enforce it by the executive of his own will," he would be helped to establish a character that would insure his lifelong safety from a great social evil.—Union Signal.—(Adv.)

dealers in Chevrolet automobiles, has taken a serious attitude toward the reconditioning and sale of used cars and within a couple of weeks expects to have a new shop completed which will not only be used for the servicing of new automobiles and repair work, but much time has been spent in the preparation of adequate equipment for reconditioning of used cars. The equipment includes the latest in labor saving machinery, especially adapted to Chevrolet automobiles, as well as a complete Duco outfit and will be laid out in a scientific way by one of the service representatives of the Chevrolet Motor Company. Mr. Weed tells us that anyone in the new car business must of necessity be in the used car business and that every bit as much thought and preparation must be given to the used car that one would expect in the new car field.

There are necessarily three grades of used cars only two of which are of any interest to the public.

First of these is the car of comparative late model which when reconditioned properly and backed by the 30-day guarantee which goes with it can honestly be termed "the used car with an o. k." that counts.

Next there is the mediocre car, ranging in price from $75 to $150 which because of its condition and value must be sold "as is." The third class is that known as "junk" and is of no interest to the public.

The new shop of the Chevrolet Company is 40 by 80 feet and is equipped with washing machine, Duco outfit, a tool room and other up-to-date appliances.

THE VILLAGE FATHERS

The passed away! Tears will unbidden start And thoughts grow tender as we trace the names Of those who sleep—our fathers, and their sires!

Back to the days of pioneering toil Stretches the kindred tie and clasps a race— A sterner and a harder race—than we, Who built anew their homes. They lived perchance In doom that seemed unequal—saye in hope And sorrow's portioned shade; but now the same Kind mother folds them to her faithful breast; The same green summer blossoms o'er their dust And murmurs to their rest. Their transient part In life was humbly played; how well, but One Their loving Father knows. Sweet be their sleep, Lulled by the ripple of the streams they loved, And kindred childhood's song!

The dark wave breaking on the emerald shore Flashes a glittering spray: So every age That dies on being's verge is crested well With memories that are sweet to store away.

Our deepest lessons may be truly learned From off the epitaphs of what hath been, Read in the clearer sunshine of today. Year chases year from earth; and each should drop Its honored morsel into Wisdom's urn, Which, like the Hebrew's manna, must be used As it is gathered. Life has not an hour To waste in doubting, while the solemn Past Is prophet to the Future. Onward, then, O let us march, strong in the focal light Experience blends with hope; and God will help The soul that toils and loves!

(When William Bache wrote the history of Bristol in 1853, at the request of the compiler, Samuel Swain, Jr., an eminent citizen of the town and a prominent member of the Society of Friends, contributed the above stanza to the memory of the early fathers of this ancient corporation.)
